

Social Audits Module 4, Topic 4

Summary

The social audit is an additional social accountability tool that is used to monitor performance. This presentation defines the tool and explains its purpose and the types of outcomes that can be expected from social audits. It then reviews the basic implementation steps in a social audit: defining objectives, identifying stakeholders, collecting and analyzing data, disseminating information, holding a public hearing, and follow-up and reporting. The presentation then briefly goes over some of the most common challenges and benefits involved in using this type of tool.
